Description

This is the ideal place to find out more about the thousand-year history of Bouillon through its varied and attractively presented exhibits. The Middle Ages are celebrated through many different works of art, then the Enlightenment, when the printing presses in Bouillon made the town known all over Europe. The visit ends with a look at works by famous local painters and some of the remains of the town's industries. A "must-see" exhibition where you can relax and enjoy culture. Each display has an explanatory panel. Waymarked trail and guidebook in English.

One-hour guided visits in English are available by prior reservation.

Joint tickets for the Castle, the Archeoscope and the Ducal Museum are available.
