

Bertrix

Attribution : (FTLB-PWillems)

Useful information

Category : Discovery and recreation

Rating : No rating

Description

The area of Bertrix is a gate to the Semois valley and three of its picturesque villages: Cugnon, Mortehan and Auby. These three villages, typical from the Ardennes, have a great charm lie long the meanders of the lazy Semois. These peaceful villages are made of old houses among which most of them are listed, with an old-fashioned architecture and schist stones, canopies,...

Apart from this tourist pole and its three picturesque villages, there is also an agricultural zone on the plateau that reflects the hard Ardennes, with the villages of Orgeo, Biourge, Rossart, Jéhonville, Assenois and Glaumont.

Among the listed monuments, there are the old church and the cemetery of Cugnon (1780), and the cemetery of Mortehan. The neo-Romanesque church of Bertrix and the original tower bell of Jéhonville are also to be seen.

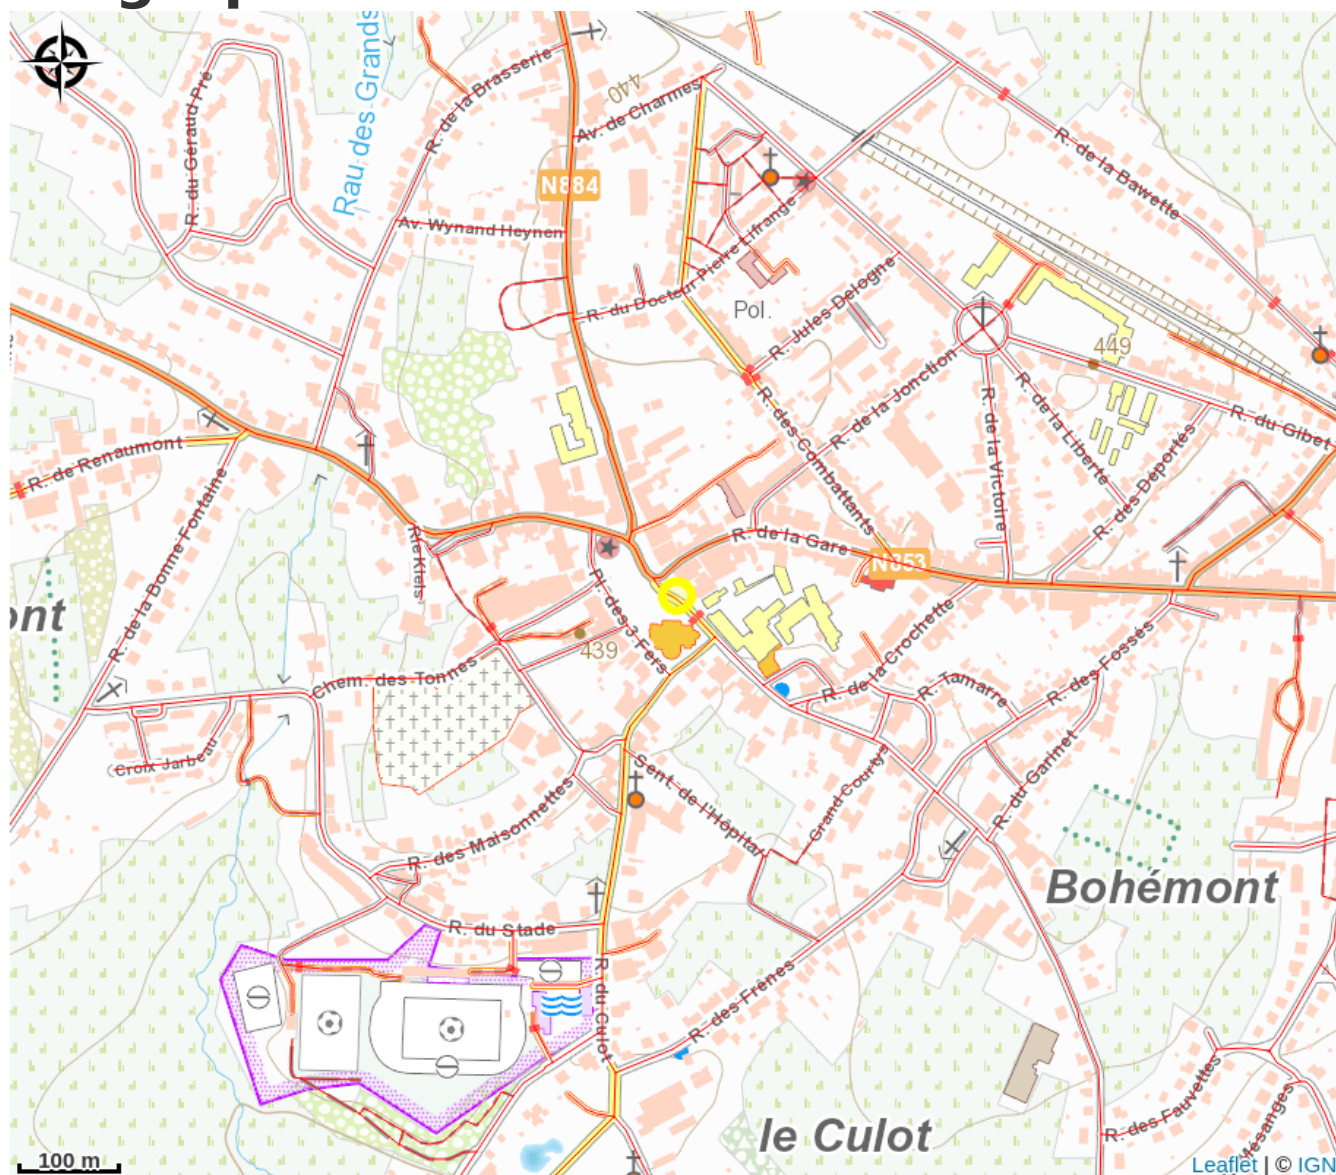

The Saint-Remacle caves, the arboretum, the sites of Trinchi and the "Château des Fées" are among the natural beauties of the place.

The inhabitants of Bertrix are called "baudets" (donkeys). A statue with three irons reminds it, on a roundabout...

Discovery categories

Built heritage, District/Village/Town.

Geographical location

All useful information

Contact

6880 - Bertrix